

George Khodos is a second-year Master's student in Bioinformatics at the Institute of Biomedicine, Pirogov Russian National Research Medical University in Moscow. He is focused on using data-driven approaches to model receptor–ligand interactions and predict binding affinities of small molecules.