Daniel Malikin is currently a Ph.D. scholar in the laboratory of Medicinal Chemistry at Moscow State University. In 2021 he graduated from Moscow State University with specialization in organic chemistry. His current research interests are applications of computational chemistry, including molecular modelling and QSAR, to the search of new potential antiviral drugs.